What message is communicated in both of these videos?

Why do you think this a valuable lesson in life and careers?

Procrastination is delaying something that needs to be done.

- If you put off doing your homework, revising, or tidying your room, you are procrastinating.
- We often procrastinate when we are outside our comfort zone, to avoid doing something we find difficult.

Think of a time when this has happened to you, what impact did this have?

Case study

Jessica is in Year 11. She has a mock History GCSE exam in one month's time.

She is thinking of going to college, so her grades really matter: she will need six GCSEs at Grade 9-5 to do the course she would like.

However, she finds History very difficult and keeps telling herself, 'There's no point in revising since I won't do well anyway.'

If we can change Jessica's attitude, we can change her actions as well.

What do you suggest Jessica should do to take action?
