Changes of state.

- Internal Energy → The energy all particles have due to particle movement & arrangement
- Temperature → A measure of the average kinetic energy of the particles
- Intermolecular forces → The forces between particles

How are the particles different in water at 80°C compared to 99°C? There is more kinetic energy so the particles speed is more.

Number	Step!
3	At -183°C the particles don't have enough energy to overcome the intermolecular forces.
5	The oxygen has condensed to a liquid.
1	The particles in a gas lose energy and start to slow.
4	The particles move together so they are touching.
2	Internal energy decreases.

Below is the script we have used in lessons. Ask two members of your household to help you. Assign characters, rehearse and perform.

Villain: (hands going for the heroine's throat) I have you now, my sweetling.

Damsel: No! Unhand me!

Hero: (entering with gun) Unhand her, villain!

Villain: And who might you be?

Hero: (hand on heart) I am to be ...her husband!

Damsel: (hand on heart) Oh, Godfrey!

Hero: (hand on heart) Oh, Rose Marie!

Damsel: (hand on heart) Oh, Godfrey!

Hero: (hand on heart) Oh, Rose Marie!

Hero: Oh, blast!
